

Model Composition 5 – Flying a Kite

There was an open field just behind David's house. On windy days, he could see many people flying their kites there. David had a new kite. It was in the shape of a sparrow. He decided to fly his kite.

David's father ran with the kite while David held the string. After a few tries, David and his father managed to get the kite to stay in the sky. The kite flew steadily in the air. As David released the string, it flew higher and higher.

After half an hour, the wind died down. The kite began to fall slowly. David and his father tugged at the string to get the kite to stay in the sky but it continued to fall. The kite eventually fell on the grass. David ran over to pick it up. His father wound the string.

David enjoyed flying his kite with his father. He could not wait to go again.
