

Our Body Systems

Each part of a living thing that helps it to function properly is known as an organ.

Our human body is made up of many different organs.

Some organs in our body are shown below.

These are some common organs in the human body.

Different organs perform different functions.

Some organs group together to form a system. Each organ in the system has its own role to play to enable the whole system to carry out its particular function.